

Robert Wilson

Deputy Secretary, Legal Affairs
California Department of Veterans Affairs

Robert D. Wilson received a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Northern Colorado in 1973 with a major in Psychology and a minor in Economics. Following his graduation, he entered the United States Marine Corps and served as a pilot (A-4M). After his discharge from the Corps, he flew commercially for several years. Mr. Wilson then entered law school at the University of Kansas and obtained his J.D. degree in 1988. He has co-authored articles on the good faith obligations imposed upon financial institutions when calling demand notes and judicial jurisdiction over foreign defendants. He practiced law as a litigator in the private sector for approximately eleven years before accepting employment with the Office of the California Attorney General. During his tenure at the Attorney General's Office, Mr. Wilson twice received Attorney General Awards for work on complex prison and governmental law cases.
